Technologent Sponsors GHX Supply Chain Summit

LAKE FOREST, CA, March 25, 2010 – Technologent, a nationwide Solutions Integrator, will participate as a sponsor at the upcoming GHX Supply Chain Summit to be held March 29-31, 2010, in Orlando, Fla. Changing the nature of the healthcare supply chain and refocusing resources in ways that improve financial and clinical performance in healthcare is the focus of the GHX Supply Chain Summit.

In its 10th year, the 2010 event is attracting record attendance from hospitals and medical-surgical suppliers across North America and Europe. In addition to keynote presentations, this year's Summit will focus on strategies to lower healthcare costs while optimizing patient care.

"Technologent is excited to be a sponsor at this year's event," said Tom Gallaway, President, "The goal of our healthcare practice is to help healthcare organizations analyze their existing environment and implement better strategies. We offer healthcare data management solutions that help reduce storage costs, improve disaster recovery and meet compliancy requirements."

Specific tracks include:

- Is Healthcare Really Unique? Building Excellence from the Outside In
- Putting "Demand" Back into the Supply and Demand Chain
- Aligning Supply Chain With Strategy: For You and your Trading Partners
- It's All About the Data
- Can the Supply Chain Improve Your Financial Performance?
- Clinical Quality and Patient Care: Supply Chain Leaders Making a Difference
- Award-winning Supply Chain Best Practices

Keynote speakers for the 2010 GHX Supply Chain Summit include:

- Ron Brownstein, political director of Atlantic Media Company, publisher of The Atlantic, National Journal and Congress Daily, leading an executive level panel discussion on healthcare reform and what must be done to truly control healthcare costs
- Brent Johnson, vice president, Supply Chain, Intermountain Healthcare, on the supply chain's role in creating a world-class healthcare organization
- Curt Selquist, former company group chairman, Johnson & Johnson Healthcare Systems, on the power of collaboration in the healthcare industry
- Jeff Skiles, co-pilot of US Airways flight 1549 that landed safely in the Hudson River, discussing how learning and adapting to new ways of doing things can help in a time of significant transformation
