Technologent Achieves EMC's Authorized Services Network Specialty Designation for Professional Services

LAKE FOREST, CA, April 20, 2010 – Technologent, a nationwide Solutions Integrator, today announced that has become a member of the EMC Velocity² Authorized Services Network (ASN) Program through the completion of specified training and qualification by EMC. This specialization will allow Technologent to deliver customers a wide range of professional services for the EMC[®] CLARiiON[®] family of networked storage systems, EMC Celerra IP storage system, Symmetrix V-Max for high-end storage, and related software and technologies. From initial storage design to complete storage architecture implementations, Technologent can provide the storage networking talent necessary to expertly integrate EMC networked storage solutions that provide customers with increased levels of business value.

"Technologent is a business-enabling technology partner and is committed to our customer's success," said Tom Gallaway, President of Technologent. "More and more, a customer's success means integrating business processes and workflow applications with advanced network communications. With proven EMC technologies and VMware, we offer secure unified datacenter and virtualization solutions that deliver critical applications anytime, anywhere at the lowest total cost ownership possible today."

As an EMC ASN partner Technologent has received advanced technical training from EMC and has access to the same EMC proprietary service methodologies and tools to deliver solutions as do EMC Services specialists. This enables Technologent to add sophisticated EMC storage services to its extensive product and solution offerings and to deliver the highest quality of customer satisfaction.
