The IT infrastructure is key to the success of virtually any major business initiative, from quickly integrating a strategic acquisition to bringing products to market cost-effectively. Yet traditional IT architectures are static and inflexible. Any sudden change in business requirements forces IT staff to respond with manual, one-off technology fixes that consume time and resources. F5 solutions provide strategic points of control throughout the IT infrastructure, enabling organizations to scale, adapt, and align with changing business demands and drive their business forward. F5 is the only Application Delivery Networking vendor that provides an open architectural framework, providing IT organizations with the flexibility to deliver and customize services that generate true business value.

"Our customers value our commitment to providing best-of-breed solutions, and we view the addition of the F5 product line as a wise investment of our time and resources. F5's Advantage Partner Program provides us with the information, tools, training, and resources we need to successfully recommend and implement F5 solutions," said Marco Mohajer, Sr. Vice President Sales and Marketing. "As an F5 partner, we can provide our customers with everything from simple load balancing capabilities to complete edge-to-core application delivery."

"We're pleased that Technologent has joined our Advantage Partner Program," said Steve McChesney, Director, Channel Sales at F5. "We set partners' requirements high, as their success is tied to ours and, in turn, our ability to deliver a superior user experience for joint customers. Partnerships with industry leaders like Technologent enable us to mutually expand our markets while helping organizations maximize the value of their technology investments."
